

Style File blog

SHOPPING ALERT

On Our Radar: Horiyoshi The Third Scarf

December 17, 2009 12:06 pm

Horiyoshi III is to the art of tattooing what Karl Lagerfeld is to couture: a living legend. Put the Japanese irezumi expert's name on a line of clothing, and you aren't going to get another Ed Hardy knockoff. Can you picture this pink peony-print silk and cashmere scarf in a Christian Audigier store? We didn't think so. Horiyoshi draws all of the designs on his sweaters, T-shirts, and accessories, not unlike the way he works freehand on his tattoo subjects. The line is made in Japan in limited quantities, which means this scarf isn't quite as rare a Horiyoshi tattoo, but it's close.

Horiyoshi the Third scarf, about $350 at Alan Bilzerian, Tomas

—Nicole Phelps

Photo: Steven Torres

tags: Alan Bilzerian, Christian Audigier, Horiyoshi III, Karl Lagerfeld, Savannah, Tomas Maier